INTRODUCTION

This publication is the third in a series of compendia reporting on the criminal justice system in Alberta. It concentrates on the period 1978 to 1982. Readers interested in information for years prior to 1978 should consult one of the previous two publications in this series (A Compendium of Criminal Justice Statistics: Alberta, 1978; A Compendium of Criminal Justice Statistics: Alberta, Supplement 1980).

This compendium reports on the three stages which make up the criminal justice system: law enforcement, courts and corrections. Unfortunately, it is impossible to attain any sort of a strict correspondence in data among the three stages because each collects data employing a different unit of analysis. Law enforcement data make use of offences as the unit of measurement, court data use the court case as the unit of measurement, and corrections data employ the correctional case as the unit of measurement. Offences are incidences which were reported to the police and have been determined through police investigation to have actually involved violation of a law. A court case is a trial, which could involve several charges and several verdicts. A correctional case is the time period between the admission of a person to an institution either with remanded charges or as a sentenced inmate, and the time at which that person receives a final release. A correctional case is not necessarily the same as an individual because one person could have more than one correctional case during the period under analysis. Because of these differing units of analysis, tracing the flow of information through the criminal justice process is not possible. Data from each stage must be interpreted in isolation from other stages.

LAW ENFORCEMENT DATA

SOURCE OF THE DATA

Since 1962, Statistics Canada (formerly, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics) has gathered and reported information concerning law enforcement in Canada through a system known as the Uniform Crime Reporting (UCR) program. The traffic and crime statistics which are collected include offences reported or known to the police, unfounded offences, actual number of offences, number of offences cleared, and number and sex of adults and juveniles charged with the offences. As well, statistics on the number of parking violations, traffic accidents and the number of persons killed and injured are gathered.

Uniform Crime Reporting data are gathered according to certain rules which affect the interpretation of the statistics. First, if a number of offences are committed simultaneously, only the most serious offence is recorded (the multiple offence rule). Second, one offence for each victim is scored for offences against persons while for property offences one offence is counted for each separate and distinct occurrence. These scoring rules mean that the data reported underestimate the absolute level of law enforcement activity. However, Uniform Crime Reporting data represent indicies with which one can make comparisons across time within a jurisdiction.

SCOPE OF THE DATA

The law enforcement data reported in this publication cover twelve jurisdictions for the five calendar years from 1978 to 1982. Municipalities with populations in excess of 15,000 were singled out for individual reporting. The words "Police Department" after the name of the municipality indicate that police services are provided by a local municipal police department and the initials RCMP indicate that policing is provided by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. The jurisdictions for which information is reported include:

1. Calgary Police Department
2. Edmonton Police Department
3. Fort McMurray RCMP
4. Grande Prairie RCMP
5. Lethbridge Police Department
6. Medicine Hat Police Department
7. Red Deer RCMP
8. Sherwood Park RCMP
9. St. Albert RCMP
10. municipalities with a population between 1,500 and 15,000 (includes local municipal police departments and RCMP)
11. rural Alberta RCMP which includes municipalities with populations less than 1,500 and rural areas
12. Alberta total (includes local municipal police departments and RCMP)

Law enforcement data for the whole province have also been included in the compendium, but it should be noted that these data do not equal the sum of the individual jurisdictions because they include offence information from the RCMP which could not be placed into any specific jurisdiction. Because of the large amount of law enforcement data, crime data can be found in Section A and traffic data in Section B of this report.

THE TABLES

The tables in the law enforcement sections are organized by jurisdiction and by the type of information which they contain. The change over the five year period 1978-1982, annual figures and annual changes for each of the five years and a breakdown of the annual figures are provided for each type of information.

The first set of tables compares the actual number of offences in Alberta with the actual number of offences in Canada for the five year period. The 1982 Canadian data are preliminary figures provided by Statistics Canada and are subject to change.

The second set of tables introduces the twelve jurisdictions by reporting the actual number of offences for each type of offence.

The third set of tables reports the actual number of persons who were charged with offences during the year. This information is also broken down into adult male, adult female, juvenile male and juvenile female categories. It should be noted that the actual number of offences and the number of persons charged need not be equal for two reasons. First, one person can be charged with a number of offences or a number of persons can be charged with one offence depending on the situation. Second, a person can be charged with an offence which occurred in a previous year.

The fourth set of tables concerns the clearance of actual offences. Offences can either be cleared by charge or cleared otherwise. An offence is cleared by charge if a charge is laid by the police against at least one person. When an offence is cleared otherwise, there must be enough evidence to support the laying of an information against an identified offender, but circumstances dictate that a charge not be laid. These circumstances include such things as the death of the offender or a witness, an extra-departmental directive, committal of the offender to a mental hospital, police discretion, diplomatic immunity, refusal of a complainant to prosecute, the offender is already serving a sentence, or the offender is in a foreign country. Those offences which are not cleared represent unsolved offences. It is possible to have clearance rates greater than 100% because an offence could have been cleared in a year following the year when it actually occurred.

The fifth set of tables reports offence rates or specifically the number of offences which were committed per 100,000 population. Population figures for the various municipalities were supplied by Alberta Municipal Affairs and Statistics Canada. Table A presents municipal populations for the years 1978 to 1982.

DATA QUALITY

The data contain some irregularities which require further explanation. In the traffic statistics, the actual number of Criminal Code driving while suspended offences decreases to zero or close to zero between 1978 and 1982 while the actual number of driving while suspended offences under Provincial Statutes increases. This was caused by the Supreme Court of Canada striking down the Criminal Code driving while suspended offence in February 1981. As well, data from the Calgary Police Department are inconsistent with data from other police departments, particularly in regard to the persons charged data.

COURT DATA

SOURCE OF THE DATA

Information for the court tables was taken from Alberta Attorney General statistical reports developed from Crown Counsel case reports.

SCOPE OF THE DATA

The data in the court tables covers court cases heard in the 1980-81, 1981-82 and 1982-83 fiscal years. According to the Alberta Attorney General, not all cases being heard are reported. The following lists the types of cases which are included:

1. all applications for extraordinary remedies, for example if a judge is asked to hear a case which is actually outside his jurisdiction (a rare occurrence);
2. all cases of indictable offences and Stated Case appeals (a special appeal in which the allegation is that the judge erred on a legal issue rather than the facts) disposed of in the Court of Queen's Bench;
3. all matters disposed of by the Court of Appeal and the Supreme Court of Canada;
4. all cases of indictable offences in the Provincial Court except:
    a. those enumerated in Section 483 of the Criminal Code (trial by magistrates), including theft $200 and under, gaming and betting offences, and any fraud not exceeding $200;
    b. preliminary enquiries in which the accused is committed to stand trial;
5. preliminary enquiries where the accused is discharged;
6. charges that are withdrawn completely and not replaced with any other charges.

THE TABLES

The first set of tables describes the number of charges and resulting verdicts for Provincial Court and Court of Queen's Bench trials for all defendants and for defendants 16 to 20 years old. In these tables, it is important to note that the number of charges does not necessarily equal the number of persons charged as one court case can involve several charges and each count of a charge is recorded. Definitions of the types of verdicts are supplied in the next section of this text. The category Other Verdicts might include not guilty by reason of insanity or for the Kienapple Principle. The Kienapple Principle is a Supreme Court decision which states that multiple convictions can not be based on the same set of facts. This principle is also known as double jeopardy.

The second set of tables deals with the number of convictions and their dispositions in Provincial Court and Court of Queen's Bench trials for all defendants and for defendants 16 to 20 years old. The number of convictions will not equal the number of sentences because all parts of one sentence are recorded. For example, a person convicted of break and enter could receive a sentence which includes incarceration and probation. All elements of this sentence would be recorded. Definitions for the unfamiliar types of dispositions can be found in the following section. An example of Other Dispositions would be restitution.

The third set of tables describes appeal results and the result of allowed appeals from the Court of Appeal and Court of Queen's Bench in Alberta. The number of allowed appeals may not equal the number of results of allowed apppeals for several reasons. All the appeals may not be reported or may not be recorded completely. Some possible results, such as the appeal being quashed, are not recorded. The result of the allowed appeal may depend on the type of appeal. For example, if a sentence is being appealed the result will usually be an increased, decreased or varied sentence.

DEFINITIONS

Because some of the terminology in the court data may not be familiar, definitions have been supplied to aid in interpreting this data.

- Absolute Discharge is when a person is found guilty but not convicted. There is no record of the conviction.

- Acquittal is the legal certification of the innocence of a person charged with a crime.

- Charge Withdrawn refers to a failure to prosecute by the person preferring charges.

- Conditional Discharge is similar to absolute discharge in that a person is found guilty but not convicted. The record will be erased if the person complies with the conditions of the discharge, for example they cannot drink or cannot associate with certain persons. To receive a conditional discharge, the maximum penalty for the offence must be less than fourteen years. Both conditional and absolute discharges are used when a discharge is judged to be in the best interest of the individual and society.

- Convictions are the result of a criminal trial in which the person is judged to be guilty as charged.

- Court of Appeal hears appeals from all other courts in Alberta and the Northwest Territories, including Court of Queen's Bench.

- Court of Queen's Bench deals with more serious criminal matters, civil matters and also hears appeals on summary convictions from Provincial Court. All offences in the Criminal Code are divided into two categories: indictable offences and summary conviction offences. Some indictable offences such as homicide must be heard in Court of Queen's Bench. For other indictable offences, the accused can elect to be heard in Court of Queen's Bench or Provincial Court. The accused would elect Court of Queen's Bench in order to have a preliminary inquiry before the trial or a jury trial.

- Probation means that a person convicted of some minor offence (particularly juvenile offenders) is allowed to return to society under a suspension of sentence under the supervision or guardianship of a probation officer.

- Provincial Court deals with civil and criminal matters such as all summary conviction offences and some indictable offences (see Court of Queen's Bench).

- Stay of proceedings is the temporary suspension of the regular order of proceedings in a case, by direction or order of the court, usually because one of the parties has failed to perform some act required by the court. An example of a reason for a stay of proceedings is where a nonresident plaintiff has been ruled to give security for court costs.

- Suspension is a conviction for a crime resulting in a sentence that is given formally, but not actually served. In effect, the defendent is not required to serve the sentence.

- Sentence varied (referring to appeals) occurs when the appeal is against the sentence. The sentence is change but not in a way which can be measured as an increase or decrease. For example, there may be a change in a probation order.

CORRECTIONS DATA

SOURCE OF THE DATA

The data reported in the corrections section of this publication were extracted from the research file of the Correctional Management Information System (CoMIS). The system contains a variety of data concerning correctional cases admitted to provincial correctional and remand centres throughout the province.

SCOPE OF THE DATA

The correctional cases selected for reporting in the compendium were based on correctional cases admitted to one of Alberta's correctional or remand centres at any time between January 1, 1980 to December 31, 1982. The tables which report release statistics are an exception. The correctional cases selected for those tables were released from a correctional or remand centre at some time between January 1, 1980 and December 31, 1982. Alberta's centres during that time included Belmont Correctional Centre, Bow River Correctional Centre, Calgary Correctional Centre, Calgary Remand Centre, Edmonton Remand Centre, Fort Saskatchewan Correctional Centre, Lethbridge Correctional Centre, Nordegg Correctional Centre, Peace River Correctional Centre, and St. Paul Correctional Centre. The corrections data are reported by calendar year.

THE TABLES

The corrections tables are organized by centre beginning with a summary of all the provincial correctional and remand centres. Because the majority of the tables are based on admissions, the correctional cases have been put into categories created to describe the types of admission. The sentenced category contains correctional cases where admission was the result of sentenced charges. The remanded category contains correctional cases where an admission was made on remanded charges and upon release no sentence had been given for those charges. This category also includes detentions admitted to Calgary Remand Centre, for example drunks held overnight. The remanded/later sentenced category contains correctional cases for which an admission was made on remanded charges which later resulted in a sentence. These categories were created by finding out the reason the correctional case was closed if it closed before December 31, 1982 or by using the status of the correctional case as of March 31, 1983. This latter date falls outside the time frame of the tables but was used to correctly categorize as many of the correctional cases which began within the time frame as possible.

The first set of tables for each centre presents admission and average daily population statistics. Average daily populations are reported for inmates both inside and outside the centre. Inmates in the outside category were taking part in special programs such as camps or day parole, on temporary absence releases, in hospital, out to court, in transit to other centres, unlawfully at large or escaped. The inside category contains all other sentenced or remanded inmates at the centre. Where applicable, the average daily population at camps is reported in a separate table.

The second set of tables describe demographic characteristics. These statistics are based on admissions and are organized by admission type. Age, sex, marital status, ethnicity, and education are reported for a category which combines sentenced and remanded/later sentenced admissions and for the category remanded admissions. Some centres do not have any remanded admissions. For confidentiality, demographic information was not reported if a category contained a small number of admissions.

The third type of table in the corrections section concerns length of sentence. Like the demographic tables, these statistics are based on admissions.

The unknown category occurs in the tables concerning marital status, ethnic status and length of sentence. This category contains correctional cases for which the information was actually not known or not available through the research file of CoMIS.

The final set of tables reports number of releases for each centre and length of stay for all provincial correctional and remand centres by admission type. Unlike the other tables, these data are based on correctional cases which ended between January 1, 1980 and December 31, 1982. There is a difference between length of stay and length of sentence. Length of stay includes remanded as well as sentenced time spent at a centre. The full length of a sentence may not be served due to remission (time taken off a sentence for good behavior) or early releases to participate in special programs.

DATA QUALITY

Before the corrections data can be analyzed, some things should be known which affect the data. Toward the end of 1981, approximately November and December, a problem arose involving input to CoMIS which subsequently affected the average daily population statistics for Calgary Remand Centre. In 1982, changes in the application of the Bail Reform Act at Calgary Remand Centre affected admissions at that centre. Comparisons of admissions between Edmonton Remand Centre and Calgary Remand Centre are not possible because detentions are not included in admissions at Edmonton Remand Centre and are included at Calgary Remand Centre. In Edmonton, detentions are sent to Edmonton Detention Centre which is under the control of the Solicitor General but which does not have a CoMIS terminal. Therefore, only those cases remanded or sentenced to Edmonton Remand Centre can be counted. It is difficult to estimate the difference in numbers this might make.
